CORPORATE RESEARCH FORUM

2017 Programme

“CRF seems to get it consistently right about what the key topics are, that we as HR professionals are wrestling with. In my opinion, their research papers are highly relevant and valuable and the conferences attract people at the highest level in HR. Their European arm is also proving to be a useful networking forum for like-minded individuals.”

Jennifer Monon
Senior HR Director, ING

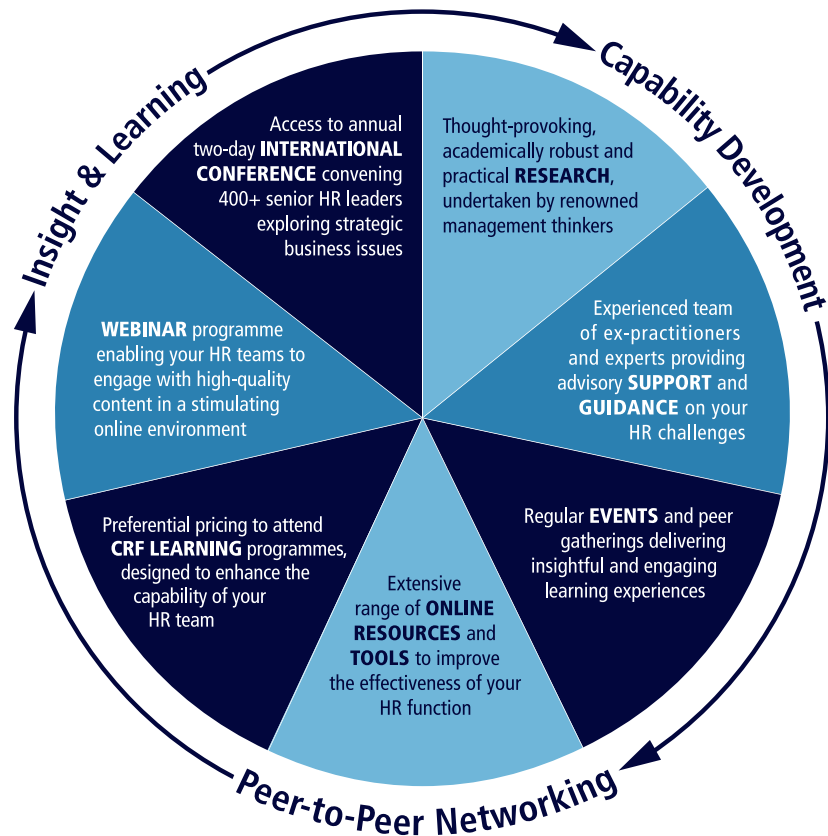

Welcome to the Corporate Research Forum 2017 programme

CRF continues to grow in membership and influence as a respected focal point for those looking to improve corporate and individual performance through people and organisational development. We focus on management techniques and people issues which address real business concerns, are underpinned by rigorous academic research and have high practical application in complex, fast-changing organisations.

Our purpose is to provide our members with access to leading research, thinkers, practitioners and, crucially, like-minded organisations determined to develop the very best environments in which their people and organisations can flourish.

Building on our 20+ years of success, 2017 sees the continuation of our annual research and event programme in the UK and mainland Europe. Supporting us are some of the world's most sought after and highly-regarded experts, ensuring our sessions remain timely, relevant and thought provoking to you and your business.

CRF delivers a range of benefits including:

“CRF offers us access to quality research, networking, resources and meetings that energise, engage and develop our diverse Human Resources community. Feedback from our HR team is always positive, stressing the pragmatism and freshness of the discussions and ideas.”

Capability Development: CRF Research in 2017

CRF is a leader in Human Resources research, analysing the role of HR in driving business performance. For over twenty years, we have used a data-driven approach to look beyond HR fads and to identify how HR supports key business objectives. We work with leading academics, experts and our member companies to determine what constitutes good practice in HR and to propose improvements to the function.

Over the past twenty years, we have researched a broad range of strategic HR topics, including talent management, leadership development, employer branding, employee engagement, organisation design, HR strategy, the future of work and career development.

What is our approach?

We aim to provide a comprehensive view of each topic, including data from company surveys, in-depth interviews with industry leaders and academic input from leading business schools around the world. We combine these inputs to develop evidence-based conclusions and practical recommendations for HR professionals.

Our research topics and questions for 2017 include:

- High Impact HR – How do we create a more business-relevant function?

In today's rapidly changing business environment, it's more important than ever for HR to be commercial, close to the business, and clearly aligned to business strategy. However, the reality for many organisations is that HR is often disconnected from business priorities, and HR's contribution to critical strategic and commercial objectives is not always clear. This report considers the current state of the HR function, and looks at the role HR should play in helping develop and execute strategy, and how HR can become more business-relevant.

- Learning – the foundation for agility and sustainable performance

Complexity, both at the organisation and individual job level, is increasing. For organisations to create and sustain competitive advantage in this context means building a culture that supports learning. At the same time, investment in formal learning has decreased, and learning has to compete with myriad other demands on individuals' time at work. This research considers the role of learning in today's organisations, how the latest thinking around adult learning is influencing the design and delivery of learning, and what we can do to create the conditions for effective learning.

- Deploying HR Analytics for Better Talent Management and Organisational Effectiveness

Analytics has become an important topic for HR in recent years, offering much promise in terms of improving practices around selection, development and performance management. This research explores whether the reality lives up to the hype, considering various examples of how organisations have set up their analytics capabilities, and what they have achieved so far. We also consider the practicalities of what to analyse and where to focus to get actionable insights.

We welcome contributions and case studies from our members and would love to hear from you. If you would like to get involved in any of the research topics for 2017, please contact our Research Director, Gillian Pillans, on +44 (0) 20 3457 2640 or email gillian@crforum.co.uk.

“In today's world, knowledge and innovation drive success for organizations. The Corporate Research Forum offers senior HR executives a unique opportunity to learn from peers, share innovative approaches to HR, and connect with global thought leaders.”

Venue

Church House
Dean's Yard
Westminster
London, SW1P 3NZ

European masterclass

Date

Thursday 2nd February
09.00 – 16.00

Venue

MCE Conference & Business Centre,
Rue de l'Aqueduc 118, 1050 Ixelles,
Belgium Brussels

Who is it for?

HR leaders who want to define and develop the role of their function. Those who are concerned with contributing to business success through commercial HR leadership in an environment where speed, agility, commercial acumen and accuracy of judgement are ever more vital.

Overview

CRF has been researching the field of HRM and turning this into actionable recommendations implemented by HR functions for over 20 years. With the pace of change, HR needs to do more. For organisations to flourish HR needs to develop talent, create a stimulating work environment and ensure that through its people, performance is optimised. This requires business analysis, a strict adherence to the principles of social science and evidence, not best practice, rhetoric, or unsubstantiated opinion.

Content

Based around the CRF Paper High impact HR – How do we create a more business-relevant function?, Pat, Phil and Nick will challenge delegates to critically consider their own organisations and share their views against a number of dimensions:

- the business environment – our changing challenging world
- organisational imperatives for sustained success
- the need for agility
- a clear definition and analysis of HR's role
- adopting the principles and practices of the social sciences
- the need for relevance and evidence
- how do we get there, and what are the practical recommendations?

Thriving In Complex Systems – Increasing Organisational Productivity

Masterclass

Date

Wednesday 8th March
09.00 – 16.00

Venue

Plasterers' Hall
One London Wall
London, EC2Y 5JU

Who is it for?

Senior HR leaders faced with the task of improving effectiveness by simplifying corporate business models and contexts.

Overview

The 21st century is an age of complex systems in which information is no longer a source of strategic advantage, and where adaptability is fast replacing every other parameter of business success. Complexity is the result of multiple, unrelated factors, that come together in unpredictable ways to create conditions in which old solutions no longer work as effectively as before. Globalisation, digital technology, and a new demographic are colluding to create an environment of complex systems which demand a new way of thinking. However, many of our people theories are largely based on military images of leaders engaging in a planned, predictable world where instructions are obeyed and strategy is king. But today's business environment bears little resemblance to this, with the three biggest challenges of succeeding in complex systems being ambiguity, attention and agility.

Content

Thriving in complex systems is about:

- understanding such systems and how they operate
- understanding the traps which prevent us from changing the way we lead
- replacing the industrial age linear processes with those conducive to complex systems
- finding the simple, integrative principles that are at the core of complex systems, like purpose and authenticity.

Sudhanshu will lead the discussions on:

- identifying the complexities that are posing business challenges
- learning to deal with complexity
- becoming aware of cognitive and behavioural traps
- developing a mindful mindset
- building the ability to lead in times of complexity and change.

Jane and Brian will present a Tesco Mission Mastery case study.

“My team and I are always impressed by the CRF events and research we participate in. It strikes the important balance between credible academic research and practical business application which is so crucial in today's commercial world.”

Sandy Begbie

Chief Operations Officer, Standard Life

Sudhanshu Palsule is an award-winning educator, CEO Advisor and leadership coach, regarded as one of the leading thinkers in the fields of Complexity and Transformative Leadership. He has taught at several leading universities and business schools including INSEAD, Cambridge University, and the Helsinki School of Economics. He is closely associated with Duke CE and has previously held a position of Senior Advisor for leadership development at the United Nations.

Dr Brian Dive is a vastly experienced international manager, consultant, and author, with almost 50 years' experience in organisation design, all aspects of strategic HR and transformational change in large organisations. For many years he was Global Head of Organisation at Unilever. In 2000, he set up his own company, DMA Consultancy. His first client was Tesco where he introduced and helped implement his concept of Work Levels.

Jane Storm leads the Group Capability Strategy for Tesco partnering with the Executive Board. She is responsible for Group Strategy in Learning, Talent, Resourcing and Organisation Design. Working across the retail businesses in the UK, ROI, Europe and Asia, as well as the Bank and Telecoms, her purpose is for colleagues to recommend Tesco as a Great Place to Shop and Work.

Lucy Knight is HR VP, Corporate Business Activities & Functions at BP. Lucy has an extensive HR career of over 20 years, spanning a number of different sectors including public transport, FMCG, engineering and pharmaceuticals. She joined BP from GE Healthcare in 2006 as the HR VP Alternative Energy, which she supported from early start-up phase to a business employing 5,000 employees worldwide.

Harnessing Innovation to Navigate a Bold but Uncertain Future

European residential workshop

Date

Monday 3rd April – Tuesday 4th April
Day One: 16.00 – 18.30 (followed by dinner)
Day Two: 08.30 – 15.00

Venue

IMD Lausanne, Chemin de Bellerive 23,
Lausanne, 1003, Switzerland

First day of the workshop will be followed by dinner at Beau-Rivage Palace Hotel, Chemin de Beau-Rivage 21, 1006 Lausanne, Switzerland.

Who is it for?

Those concerned with improving organisation innovation and those wanting to understand why and how it can be improved.

Overview

Innovation is an organisational characteristic which everyone at all levels should embrace. In this sense, HR functions not only have to be innovative of themselves but more importantly, set the tone for innovation throughout the organisation and its people. Innovation often implies change and not being hidebound by the way things are currently done. This can be uncomfortable.

Innovation has to be joined up, business relevant and avoid unintended consequences. It is vital to remember that innovation is not an end in itself but a stepping stone to improved performance and business success.

Content

- what is innovation, what is it not?
- how do we identify innovation in people and encourage innovative behaviour?
- do innovative people necessarily lead to innovative organisations?
- innovative cultures: how do we develop and manage them; what innovation culture choices might your organisation wish to consider and/or experiment with?
- is there a limit to innovation?
- what is the cost of innovation and can we measure the benefits?
- how should HR leaders be equipping their executive teams and organisations to keep up to date on innovation, technological developments and future scanning?

Supported by case studies and drawing on the experiences of delegates, the presenters will address these questions and suggest ways in which organisations may become even more innovative and commercially successful.

“Corporate Research Forum provides a great way to meet with senior HR colleagues from other businesses around relevant topics in an informal and time effective way.”

Mark Wells

Group HR Director, Experian

Bill Fischer is Professor of Innovation Management at IMD. Bill co-founded the IMD programme on Driving Strategic Innovation in cooperation with the Sloan School of Management at MIT. Bill also authors a regular column for Forbes.com entitled The Ideas Business. His book, The Ideas Business and Reinventing Giants, which addresses business model and corporate culture reinvention in a mature, commodity business, has been short-listed for Thinkers50 Book of the Year award.

Howard Yu is Professor of Strategic Management and Innovation at IMD. He specialises in technological innovation, strategic transformation and change management. His teaching and research activities focus on why and how some firms can sustain new growth while others cannot. In 2015 Professor Yu was featured in Poets & Quants, a well-respected higher education resource, as one of the Best 40 Under 40 Professors.

Deborah Baker is the Group Director for People at Sky, the leading entertainment and communications company in the UK, Germany, Italy and Ireland. Starting her career at Ford Motor Company in Dagenham she moved to Schlumberger, Grand Metropolitan and then into retailing. Before joining Sky she was SVP of HR for Burberry worldwide.

Michael Held is Design Director for EMEA and AP at the Steelcase Learning and Innovation Center in Munich. Previously, he was Director - Design Management for Product, Communication and User Experience Design at Phillips Electronics in Hong Kong and Singapore. Michael frequently speaks at conferences and universities on the topic of user centric design and experiences. His work has been well recognized, receiving many international design awards.

Leading at the Edge

“CRF is peerless in the field of HR thought leadership, bringing together the best of academic thinking and real world application. This creates a stimulating – often provocative – but always constructive environment in which to share ideas and learn. Nobody does it better.”

Dan Simpson

Head of Talent & Regional Lead,
People & Leadership Europe, Siemens

Who is it for?

The programme is for those tasked with improving the performance of leaders, teams, large groups, and organisations for sustained performance.

Overview

Why do some leaders overcome impossible barriers and persevere to achieve outcomes when others give up? The answer is through their desire for relentless improvement, leaders at the edge unlock the highest levels of performance, making work a more exciting place to be. Leading at the edge enables people to play to win with a focus on outcomes.

Cutting edge leaders know about risks, trust, change and creating opportunities to foster success. They are comfortable with the many complex changes and challenges to achieve high performance. Drawing on the latest research on high performance from a wide range of sectors, everyone can translate this knowledge to their own world of leading themselves and others. The essential question is, how successful do you want to be as a leader?

Content

In this two day residential workshop participants will undertake pre-event assignments and be absorbed in short presentations, small group work, role playing, action learning and planning follow-up assignments.

In sharing his Leading at the Edge approach, George Kohlrieser will look at:

- focusing to overcome negative mindsets and how brain science can be effective
- pillars of high performance leadership
- what hostage negotiators know and do to get 95% success rate
- communication for high impact, the power of dialogue to build bridges and common understanding and the cycle of bonding
- handling difficult conversations, conflict management and resistance to change
- the role of influencing and persuasion in the negotiation process and the law of reciprocity
- the need for leaders to be a secure base to build trust by balancing caring and daring
- the art of concession making as a key to high impact negotiation.

George Kohlrieser is an internationally recognised expert on leadership. He is a Professor of Leadership and Organizational Behaviour at IMD, and author of the internationally bestselling book Hostage at the Table: How Leaders Can Overcome Conflict, Influence Others, and Raise Performance, which received the Best Business Book Award 2007 from DCF (French Association of Business Leaders) and Best Management Book 2008 in Germany by Managementbuch.de.

Understanding Potential – Are We Looking In The Wrong Place?

Lecture and drinks reception

Date

Wednesday 7th June
18.00 – 21.00

Venue

Haberdashers' Hall
18 West Smithfield
London, EC1A 9HQ

Who is it for?

Anyone who thought they understood the Nature versus Nurture debate.

Overview

Oliver James will challenge orthodoxy in asserting the vital role of parental influence and early experiences. Whilst based on early experience, the relevance and implications for the techniques of the HR profession are profound.

Content

It's a fact that no genes, or collections thereof, have been found to explain more than tiny (1-5%) amounts of heritability for psychological traits – intelligence, personality and mental illness. This gulf between the findings of twin studies and direct ones of genetic variants was dubbed the 'missing heritability' in a 2009 paper published in Nature.

If genes seem less relevant to intelligence or motivation, parenting is emerging as increasingly more significant. It's not just the publicised evidence that exceptional skills require 10,000 hours of deliberate practice, nor the fact that one third of exceptional achievers (including British Prime Ministers and American Presidents) lost a parent before the age of 14. For anyone, the mixture of childhood maltreatment, role in the family script and the amount and kind of love received in the early years emerge as critical.

If we really want to understand the potential performance of our workforce, we need to measure their childhoods every bit as much as the crude conventional tools – the overrated Big 5 personality traits, IQ tests and other cognitive measures. It remains a mystery why HR departments have not been using the Adverse Childhood Experiences instruments, for example.

The future for HR lies in a much more sophisticated analysis of the psychopathology of performance rather than measurement of supposedly inherited competence.

"I love the substance and style of CRF. It's an upbeat, thought provoking, future-focused forum where you can tap into the latest topics and network with smart people. If you are a busy HR professional who wants to stay sharp, it's a super investment of your time."

Mary Alexander

Vice President – People, EMEA, Americas & APAC Regions, PayPal

Oliver James is a Chartered Psychologist and the author of several bestselling books, including They F You Up (2002), Affluenza (2007), Office Politics – How to thrive in a world of lying, backstabbing and dirty tricks (2013), Not In Your Genes and Upping Your Ziggy – How David Bowie Faced His Childhood Demons and How You Can Face Yours (both 2016). After a degree in Social Anthropology at Cambridge University and training as a child clinical psychologist at Nottingham University, he worked as a Research Fellow at Brunel University and then in a mental hospital, before becoming a television producer, journalist, radio broadcaster and television presenter.

Venue

Church House
Dean's Yard
Westminster
London, SW1P 3NZ

European masterclass

Date

Thursday 6th July
09.00 – 16.00

Venue

Venue: Waldorf Astoria Berlin,
Hardenbergstraße 28, 10623 Berlin

Who is it for?

Those involved in designing, commissioning and delivering organisational learning and looking to ensure its link with sustainable business performance.

Overview

As the rate of change accelerates and organisations, as well as individual jobs, increase in complexity, corporate and personal learning continue to be critical to adaptive, improving businesses. Delivery methods may change, as does personal motivation to learn, but successful organisations embed a learning culture which becomes a natural part of their way of doing things. We will be taking stock of where we are with organisational learning, assessing the benefits which can accrue and developing strategies for even better returns.

Content

Successful learning organisations do not happen by accident but come about as a result of much detailed preparation and planning, not to mention thorough implementation. With the help of case studies we will cover a number of these issues including:

- is there such a thing as a learning organisation, who has ever seen one and how would you describe it?
- why learning is important in today's context and where should we invest?
- the 70:20:10 concept of experience, listening and formal learning
- what are the adult learning processes, how do grown-ups learn, are methods changing?
- how do we create the conditions in organisations for people to want to learn and avoid the barriers which prevent learning?
- how is learning impacted by job design, organisation design and context?
- who is important in learning – individuals, the boss, the learning function, HR or external agencies?
- what is the usefulness of tools, PDPs, learning logs and similar – can we evaluate learning?
- is there anything in neuroscience that we should be thinking about, or be aware of?

Our objective will be to raise the importance of a considered and systematic approach to learning in the minds of our audience.

Organisational Performance Clinic with Gerry Ledford

Date

Wednesday 6th September
09.00 – 16.00

Venue

Corporate Research Forum
One Heddon Street, Mayfair
London W1B 4BD

Gerry Ledford will be conducting an Organisational Performance Clinic for those interested in taking these concepts further and kick-starting their own long-term improvement programmes. He will show in more detail the results of USC's work on performance management improvement.

Who is it for?

Those interested in business performance improvement. HR leaders particularly will want to assess the way their function contributes to organisation performance through its own adaptive inputs, the nurturing of a high performance output driven culture and the dissemination of a clear and winning strategy.

Overview

This learning event will begin by defining performance not just through single and immediate measures but by assuming that most companies are in business for the long term. We need to measure performance over extended periods. What are the things we should measure and how can we justify investment in organisational performance improvement in the long term when many stakeholders take a shorter term view?

Content

Investing for the longer term is often difficult in an environment where short-termism is becoming predominant, and investors are looking for returns today rather than at some time in the future. Smart and responsive organisations will have:

- a clear and compelling strategy
- a high performance culture
- highly trained, skilled and motivated people
- an evaluation feedback process acting as both a learning experience and adjustment mechanism.

Performance improvement is a major part of HR's contribution. We need to ensure that:

- people understand where the value is
- there is key people alignment with strategic direction and ongoing performance communication
- there are skill-sets, competences, motivation and reward structures to deliver the strategy
- there is full evaluation at individual, team and organisational levels
- there is an overall culture which supports performance improvement.

The day will challenge attendees to embrace organisation improvement, not as a single event but as an ongoing, long-term way of optimising performance.

Clockwise from top left:
Gerry Ledford, Wendy Hirsh,
Dr Rebecca Homkes, Mike Haffenden,
Chris Johnson, David Birtwistle

Gerry Ledford is Senior Research Scientist at the Center for Effective Organizations at USC. He is a recognised authority on aligning human capital practices to business strategy. Areas of interest include total rewards, employee engagement and involvement, talent management, design of work, large-scale organisational change, and HR technology. Gerry is leading several projects on performance management practices, including rating-less appraisal, continuous feedback, and crowd-sourced feedback.

Wendy Hirsh is a researcher and consultant, specialising in the future-oriented aspects of people management - workforce planning, succession, talent and development and has conducted a number of studies in the area. In 2015, Wendy was voted number 9 in HR Magazine's Most Influential UK HR Thinkers.

Dr Rebecca Homkes is a Teaching Fellow at the LBS's Department of Strategy and Entrepreneurship as well as its Centre for Management Development. She is a Fellow at the London School of Economics' Centre for Economic Performance (CEP) and a Director at the Ashridge Strategic Management Centre. Through her consultancy firm, she works with global CEOs and executive teams on strategy and execution.

Mike Haffenden is a Director of CRF. He has worked in Senior HR roles in the US and Europe with major international businesses including Avon, Rowntree, Unilever and Hewlett Packard. He founded CRF as a research consortium to investigate the principles and practices that make a difference in people management, PARC, a research group investigating good practice in performance, reward and governance and Strategic Dimensions, a leading HR recruitment business.

Chris Johnson is a senior partner at Mercer and is the EuroPac leader for Mercer's Talent business. With 25 years consulting experience with a broad range of major organisations in the public, not-for-profit, and private sectors in Africa, Asia, Europe and the US, Chris has extensive experience advising on diversity of business performance improvement through organisational change enabled by aligned people management programmes and effective leadership and management.

David Birtwistle is HR Director, Performance Reward & Engagement for Jaguar Land Rover. David is responsible for strategy and policy relating to performance management, employee engagement, executive and manager compensation, international assignments and employee benefit plans worldwide. David also has responsibility for the HR shared service team of 120 professionals.

Who is it for?

Senior business people, HR leaders and specialists interested in creating environments to enable collaboration and understanding the benefits whilst being aware of the pitfalls. How do we seek collaborative opportunities with other organisations and how does the changing nature of work impact collaboration?

Overview

We are embarking on an age of collaboration, where multiple forces are coming together enabling collaboration to thrive, both inside and between organisations. Emerging disruptive technologies, globalisation, diversity of thinking, customer demands, extended communications, psychology of the emerging workforce and economic pressures are all combining to encourage teamwork, sharing and new ways of operating. Successful organisations will be those who embrace the opportunities which collaboration offers.

Content

Through the contribution of our speakers and facilitated discussion, the conference will suggest practical solutions to enhance the way organisations collaborate internally and externally.

Discussion will focus on:

- How do we identify top talent? Who in our organisations is the glue that connects the rest of the business and drives collaborative thinking? What do the networks of successful people look like? How do we channel collaborative thinking?
- What lessons can be learnt from history about forming highly effective teams? What practical steps can we implement to ensure project teams deliver? Is the nature of teamwork changing with a multi-generational workforce?
- With “uberisation” disrupting industries, is collaboration the best defensive strategy? How do we successfully work with organisations that can be customers, partners, suppliers, competitors or increasingly all four?
- Can collaboration be a distraction when what business needs most is focus? How do we avoid overloading the willing employee? Who’s more valuable the crusader or the collaborator?

Attendees will also be experiencing and interacting with a live jazz band through the two days.

“I continue to be impressed by the way Corporate Research Forum links the best of leading academic input to the real organisation and people issues faced by business in today's uncertain environment. Added to that they are always a pleasure to work with.”

Venue

Plasterers' Hall
One London Wall
London, EC2Y 5JU

Who is it for?

Those who want to improve organisation effectiveness by effective analysis and subsequent deployment of analytics to improve the execution of strategy.

Overview

Analytics is the identification, interpretation and communication of meaningful patterns in data. Organisations are starting to apply analytics to business data to describe, predict and improve business performance. Inevitably, analytics has started to become an important topic area within the HR community with significant claims for improvement in selection, performance management, talent management, employee engagement and workforce planning, amongst others.

Content

Conferences, consultancy offerings and publications in this area continue to proliferate, coupled with claims for substantial productivity and performance improvement. Closer examination indicates that many of the claims are unfounded and that analytics without the essential preliminary groundwork is likely to lead to meaningless outcomes on issues which are not important. This session is not about analytics for its own sake. We will discuss:

- how to prioritise and what to analyse to get actionable insights
- Alec's 'organisational systems approach' to diagnosing the issues that need to be addressed
- what questions should we be asking and what types of analyses of people and business processes in organisations do we need to apply?
- the methodology which can serve as a key element in any approach to organisation analytics.

Alongside Alec's session, we will hear the views of experts and practitioners who will provide examples of where their methodologies have been used in practice to improve organisation effectiveness.

“CRF provides valuable insight through research and events which are credible, pragmatic and engaging – helping us stay on the forefront of what’s next in the rapidly changing world in which we operate.”

Alec Levenson is an Economist and Senior Research Scientist at the Center for Effective Organizations, Marshall School of Business, USC. His action research and consulting work with global companies aims to optimise job and organisation performance and HR systems. This work combines the best elements of scientific research and practical, actionable knowledge that companies can use to improve performance, drawing on a number of disciplines. Alec has also trained HR professionals in human capital analytics. He is the author of Strategic Analytics: Advancing Strategy Execution and Organizational Effectiveness.

Dr Nigel Guenole is an academic at University of London. He is co-author of The Power of People: Learn how successful organizations use workforce analytics to improve business performance. Nigel has published extensively in journals including Industrial Organizational Psychology and Frontiers in Quantitative Psychology. He teaches on talent management and statistical modelling. Nigel leads a team at IBM that is training cognitive computing systems in behavioural science.

Alex Fergus is Global Head of HR at Thomson Reuters, where he leads the Human Resources team for the Financial & Risk business, providing HR leadership and support to successfully deliver the strategy, culture and growth priorities of the business. Before joining Thomson Reuters, Alex spent 10 years at British Petroleum plc (BP) and 3 years at Castrol Lubricants where he was Global Head of HR.

CRF webinars

Our webinar series aims to continue the debate generated from our research reports and member meetings, enabling global teams to access high quality content in an online environment built for exchange and discussion. In the style of all CRF events, our webinars are engaging, interactive, content rich and, importantly, to the point, recognising the time constraints everyone operates under.

In 2017, CRF webinars will take place on the following dates:

- Tuesday 14 March
Optimising HR's business contribution – where are the opportunities and pitfalls?
- Wednesday 12 July
Harnessing learning to drive innovation and performance
- Tuesday 14 November
HR Analytics: does the reality live up to the hype?

For further information on our 2017 webinar programme please contact Viktorija Verdina at viktorija@crforum.co.uk or +44 (0) 20 3457 2640.

Special Interest Groups

The aim of these groups is to take a deep dive into a research topic and produce practical actions to take away that can be applied within the organisation. SIGs are designed for senior HR practitioners, to assess the practical implications of the research, share their personal experiences and draw out key practical learning points to apply in their own organisations. These groups also provide networking opportunity for Members on a smaller intimate level.

Special Interest Group meetings for 2017 are currently planned for the following dates, where you will benefit from deeper exploration of the topics highlighted earlier in the programme:

- Tuesday 21 March
Thriving in Complex Systems
- Thursday 14 September
Improving Performance
- Thursday 30 November
Deploying HR Analytics for Organisational Effectiveness

The groups are deliberately kept small to encourage dialogue and participation is limited to 20-25 individuals. For further details please contact Lynn Little at lynn@crforum.co.uk or on +44 (0) 20 3457 2640 to find out more and reserve your place.

Expert Advisory Forum

We welcome issues being raised by members looking to structure their thinking around a particular topic. Access to our Expert Advisory Forum is available online to all members. This in-house briefing service enables members to seek the views of a range of specialists, in addition to our own team of experienced HR professionals. CRF has an extensive international network of subject experts including academics, practitioners and member companies, many of whom have highly regarded practices and processes which may be close to your particular area of enquiry.

Managed by the CRF team and included within the annual subscription fee, this service provides a fast and efficient link through which members are able to obtain advice, guidance and the experiences of others before embarking on their own interventions or committing to major expenditure.

To find out more please contact Terri Hathaway at terri@crforum.co.uk or +44 (0) 20 3457 2640.

“Not only do CRF events provide us with fantastic networking opportunities, where we meet like-minded peers, my colleagues and I benefit from the informative learning sessions. We get access to industry leading speakers and thought leaders and the range of topics mean that we benefit across the whole of the business.”
